TALMAGE SERMON

By Rev.
FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., Pastor of Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago.

Chicago, March 20.—This sermon administers a severe rebuke to fault finders, gossipers, slanders and malicious mongers and shows by contrast how Christlike it is to be generously silent rather than censorious in dealing with the weaknesses of others. The text is 11 Samuel 1, 20. "Tell it not in Gath; publish it not in the streets of Askelon.""Silence," once wrote a trenchant and poetic author, "is only music deafened." By the grace of God I would prove that gospel silence may be musical without being always unbecoming. It is often a golden silence, wide and sweet, and in our day it is more needed than in any other.The golden lips of gospel silence are more eloquent than any other. They speak of the love of God, and the love of man, and the love of truth, and the love of righteousness, and the love of peace, and the love of purity, and the love of holiness, and the love of glory, and the love of life, and the love of death, and the love of heaven, and the love of hell, and the love of all things.The golden lips of gospel silence are

Reaching For Forty Ideals.

A man caught himself up by pulling at his own hair. He must have a great deal to draw himself out of himself. When Minkner's famous picture, "Christ in the Storm," was being exhibited in one of our American cities, an unkind and filthy looking man was one day seen to enter the room and to stand and look for hours upon the face of the Christ.The golden lips of gospel silence are

love of all things.
